WHEELING, JULY 18, 1803.

Train Robbing and Train Wrecking. The New York Railroad Gazette publishes a remarkable statistical record, which, it says, it has been led to compile in view of an apparent epidemic of of train robberies in this country. In investigating the subject the Gazette included train wrecking, and the result is a rare collection of most interesting figures, not without a moral.

The record begins with January, 1893, and shows that in the first half of the present year, there were "in the United States and Canada sixty-one attempts to wreck trains and in the United States alone twenty-one attempts to rob them." Most of these attempts the record shows, were unsuccessful, and in no case was any one effort wholly successful-that is, the robbers met with bad luck, and the train wreckers caused no serious wrecks. But the figures are by no mean pleasant to contemplate and the Gazette, in commenting on its own showing puts the facts in a forcible light in the following sentence: "We think of this as a highly civilized country, and yet we find in six months sixtyone attempts at a crime far more atrocious than plundering caravans, and twenty-one attempts at robbery bolder and more dangerous than the exploits of Dick Turpin."

The most remarkable fact brought out in connection with this record is that the crimes, to use the Gazette's own expression, are "not confined to the least civilized parts of the United States." The figures presented showing the geographical distribution of the crimes are startling in this respect. We quote from the Gazette's record as

We find that Massachusetts and Illinois head the list in the number of attempts to wreck trains and that Ohio comes next. In these three respectable states 31 per cont of all such orimes was concentrated, and New York follows next in order. This curious circumstance may be exwas concentrated, and New York follows next In order. This curious circumstance may be explained partly by the great train inleage in those states. The attempts at train vecting were more numerous, because the trains were more numerous. Irobably a more important element is the fact that many of these efforts to wreck trains are made by tramps, who naturally infest those states in which the distance is not too long between pic, to say nothing of drinks. The ingenious statistician of crimes may be disposed to carry, this speculation further, but we are content with the explanations suggested.

posed to carry this speculation further, but we are content with the explanations suggested. The geographical distribution of attempts at train robbing is also curiously interesting. We find the same number of these stempts in Iowa as in the Indian Territory and Okiahoma taken together. Texas follows next; and then Kansas and Nebraska. In fact, 67 per cent of all train robberies and attempted train robberies in the United States are found in these four states and territories. Of course the population of the Indian Territory and Okiahoma is not cheloe, and Texas has a large semi-criminal elecancie in its population; but now shall we explain the fact that Kansas Nebraska and Iowa Inrish so many of the train robberies, and that more have occurred in Iowa that in any other one State?

This is indeed a curious and interestfng collection of data-and the statistician of crime will find in it a suggestion that it would be well to follow up the record in the future, while the theorist on matters touching criminal history will find a new field in which to exercise his genius.

It is interesting to note before leaving the subject, and as a further hint to the statistician and theorist of crime, that 75 per cent of the attempts at train wrecking took place during the months of April, May and June, and that all the attempts at train robberies occurred in May and June. In fact the crimes seem to have been epidemic and confined to the season embraced in these months. Perhaps the theorist can figure out the cause of this singular phase of the subject.

Almost Incredible.

The superintendent of the cold-storage building which was burned on the World's Fair grounds last week, tells a story, which, if true, puts a new face on the circumstances, so far as they concern the responsibility for the fatalities. He states that it was known by the occupants of the building that the fire was at the bottom of the tower, and that at the first alarm Fire Marshal Murphy and Captain Fitzpatrick were so informed. He charges that Murphy and Fitzpatrick ignored the warnings not to send their men to the top of the tower to certain death, and told the men in the building to mind their own business. The superintendent charges that the fire chiefs were anxious to make a grand display of the work of the Chicago fire department in the presence of the many thousands of spectators from all parts of the world, and in order to do so recklessly drove their men to the top of the tower. When some of the the ice baron.

firemen hesitated they were taunted with being cowards by their chief and peremptorily ordered to go. When one attache of the cold storage company dared to inform Captain Fitzpatrick that the fire was at the bottom and should be fought there he was knocked down for what the captain was pleased to call his impudence. Other statements are also to the effect that the loss of life was unnecessary, and due to the anxiety of the fire officers to make a display; that the fire could have been extinguished at the foot of the tower, where it originated, and that it was thirty-eight minutes after the alarm was sounded before a stream of water was playing on the flames.

The story is almost incredible, and yet it is asserted that it is capable of proof, and Chief Murphy, it is asserted. "refuses to talk on the subject." The outcome of the investigation, which will surely bring out the facts, will be watched with interest in view of these new developments. It is hoped, for the credit of the Chicago fire department, that the charges will not be sustained; but if they are, the direct responsibility for the fearful loss of life should be placed where it belongs.

Besido these charges against Murphy and Fitzpatrick, the assertions that the building was a death-trap and was not constructed with a view to the safety of human life are insignificant.

THERE is a well-defined movement on foot to set about immediately, at the work of tinkering with the tariff when Congress meets. What the country wants is the immediate settlement of the silver question. There is no demand for anything else just at present. One thing should be attended to at a time, and the first thing to demand attention is that which caused the call of the extra session. The people are not howling for a repeal of the McKinley bill-only the political demagogues are doing that, and they are not howling as loud as they were before last fall's election. The money crisis is the one thing that is disturbing the peace of mind of the people. Let Congress take hold of it and settle it at once. The tariff tinkers should take a back seat.

The Populist papers of Kansas have perpetrated a real mean joke on Judge Horton, chief justice of the supreme court of that state. They are unkind enough to publish a letter written to him by an Altoona, Pennsylvania, girl, with whom he had a harmless flirtation on a railway train. The wording of the letter isn't calculated to increase respect for the dignified judge, since it suggests that he had been playing the part of a gay masher. It was a private communication, however, and does not affect the judge's judicial standing. Its publication was a rare exhibition of malice and Judge Horton ought to make an example of the cruel enemies who "gave it away."

THE Parkersburg Munchausen, after a few months' rest, has resumed business at the old stand and the metropolitan papers are again paying for fabulous stories about impossible doings in the "wilds of West Virginia." His latest effort is a hair raising description of the discovery of a volcano "in the neighborhood of Murphy's creek, about five miles from Weston." The "burning mountain" was, as usual, discovered by "a party of hunters," and if it's not gone it is there yet. The newspapers that paid for the fakir's production are out of pocket, but they have the satisfaction of knowing that their readers have been beautifully imposed upon.

Ir anything was needed to emphasize the fact that Sunday opening of the World's Fair has proved a failure it came Sunday, when the total admissions were only 35,000, notwithstanding it had been extensively ad tised that the gate receipts would be devoted to the relief of the families of the victims of last week's fire.

THE hotel proprietors at the seaside resorts complain of the dull season and the fact that the World's Fair is attracting their patrons Chicagoward, They should not complain. The summer resorts we have with us always. but the Columbian Exposition comes but once in four centuries. The fair will have its inning.

Ir is sad to contemplate that when the extra session moets Senator Teller and one or two other gentlemen who have grotesque views on the monetary situation will be there. They will insist on being heard, and judging from some of their recent uttorances it is sad to think what the senate will have to ondure.

J. N. Fires, better known as the "Immortal J. N.," is dead. He was a queer character, whose eccentricities could hardly be classified with insanity. He will "assume the pressure" no more, but for him that mysterious veil has finally been lifted, and may it be his portion to look upon a pleasant prospect.

THE election of Prof. I. C. White, West Virginia's distinguished geologist, as chairman of the mining jury at the World's Fair, was proper from every standpoint. No man in the country is botter equipped for the position, and West Virginia approclates the honor.
